DETAILED ACTION

1. It is hereby acknowledged that the following papers have been received and placed of record in the file: Amendment (dated 11/29/04).
2. Claims 1-16 are presented for examination.
3. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

4. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
5. Claims 14-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.
6. Claim 14 recites “said static random access memory connected to and powered by a system power supply which remains active whenever AC power is supplied to the computer system.” First of all, it is not clear whether “which” refers to the random access memory or the power supply. Secondly, it is not clear whether the phrase “whenever AC power is supplied to the computer system” refers to the system is ON or OFF.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

7. Claims 9-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over applicant's admission of prior art [AAPA] and Yamauchi et al. [Yamauchi] (U.S. Patent No. 5,835,952).
8. Regarding claims 9 and 10, AAPA teaches a system substantially as claimed comprising: dynamic random access memory [application's specification, p. 1, lines 22-25]; initialization memory (ROM) containing initialization code for initializing the dynamic random access memory at system startup [application's specification, p. 2, lines 4-5], and a memory (processor's registers) functional at system startup for storing variable used for initializing the dynamic random access memory [application's specification, p. 2, lines 8-12].

AAPA does not explicitly teach that the memory used for storing variable is a static random access memory (SDRAM).

Yamauchi teaches a system for executing codes including an additional SDRAM coupled to a CPU [Fig. 6]. Yamauchi discloses that either SRAM or processor's registers could be used without departing from the scope of the invention [col. 9, lines 13-15].

One of ordinary skill in the art would have recognized that the SRAM could be used in place of the processor's registers or vice versa depends on the need of the system, i.e. when cost need to be reduced, processor's register could be used instead of an additional SRAM, however, when space is needed for executing codes, additional SRAM is needed. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the teachings of AAPA to include an additional SRAM used when executing codes as taught by Yamauchi when space is needed for executing codes.

9. Regarding claim 11, one of ordinary skill in the art would have recognized that SRAM could be used for executing any program codes beside initialization code to avoid the wasting of hardware.

10. Regarding claims 12 and 13, one of ordinary skill in the art would have recognized that in order to use SRAM for executing codes stored in ROM (initialization memory), the SRAM is obviously assigned address overlaying a portion of the address space assigned to the ROM, otherwise the SRAM could not be cooperated with the ROM to execute the codes stored in ROM.

Allowable Subject Matter

11. Claims 1-8 allowed.

12. Claims 14-16 would be allowable when the above 112 rejections are overcome.
